Re: Letter of invitation

Dear Mary Foley,

After 12 years of democracy, South Africa has established itself as a solid and influential country in its region, and is proving to be the powerhouse of the African continent economically and a shining light morally.

As a country re-creating itself and addressing monumental challenges internally, while being exposed to the growing tide of globalization and its international role (for example being accepted onto the U.N Security Council, and continual conflict resolution missions), it offers unique and fascinating opportunities for professional and academic exchange.

As a nationwide professional organization, DENOSA serves the best interests of its members to more frequently communicate with International nurses in their field of specialty. The exchange will produce a breakthrough toward a long desired method of holistic and interdisciplinary nursing care system involved by medicines of both nations.

The Democratic Nursing Organisation of South Africa (DENOSA) warmly invites nursing professionals from abroad to come to South Africa to explore, in depth and detail, the many challenges and complexities, interests, practices and strengths of this rewarding career as it plays out in the dynamic South African environment.

The U.S. organization, Global Reach Institute for International Exchange, has many years of experience in promoting friendly and constructive academic exchange between international professionals and those of the Republic of South Africa. Global Reach's commitment to bridging the world has never wavered.

We are honored to invite and entrust Global Reach to continue developing American nursing delegations to visit South Africa in the future, and we are committed to assisting in the arrangement of professional meetings and site visits that allow for new relationships, educational opportunity, and joint collaboration between U.S. and South African nurses and their respective affiliations.
